Each year we have our attention called to the condition, needs, and necessities of our schools, but as yet we see no new force brought into action to meet the requirements which exist in our present system, and where partial failure has occurred in a few cases the cause may be traced largely to outside influence beyond the teacher's control. Notwithstanding all unfavorable conditions, a marked interest has prevailed in most of our schools. Especially is this true where parents have shown an interest in the welfare of the school. I believe the greatest attainment, to bring our schools to their fullest possible efficiency (whether we continue the present system, or adopt the town system) is the hearty co-operation of the parents with the teacher. The effect of this combined influence is to banish the vulgarity and rudeness too often noticeable among pupils. Let the interest of the parents be felt by aiding to secure prompt attendance, providing necessary books, visiting the school, and adding the might of their voices in favor of obedience to rules and courtesy to all. Let them not forget that teachers hold the same position in the government of children that they do; that pupil or class must be a willing sharer in the work or the desired result is never reached. If parents indulge in open criticism, or speak disrespectfully of the teacher at home, the child remembers it in the schoolroom and the teacher's influence is at an end. The pupil's welfare, physical, mental and moral, is, for the time, in the teacher's hands--a sacred trust, and if parents, by indifference, refuse their cordial, respectful support what can be expected?

The unattractive, almost repulsive condition of some of our schoolrooms is such as to create a dislike and disregard for school work, promoting rude and careless habits.

All must hail the new and commodious building--the daily home of the school in District No. 5--erected last summer, as a harbinger of broader, more refined and effective work made pleasant for teacher and pupils, a force of itself, an object of pride and inspiration.

Two public examinations have been held during the year with satisfactory results, yet such examinations fail to prove qualifications, without which, the best teaching is impossible. That unflinching patience, that high regard for truth, and that Christian courtesy, which a teacher ought to possess, are elements, and not the least important, exhibited only in the schoolroom. Inspection alone will reveal this and frequent visits from the parents make official visits less needed. In this way many errors may be corrected and teacher and pupil stimulated.

In conclusion, I urge upon all a renewed sense of the responsibility of lifting our schools to a higher order that the children may be better fitted for the activities and duties of life in any station.

HENRY J. MERRILL, SUPERVISOR OF SCHOOLS.
